bruuuuuuuu

Imagine the scene: relaxing on the deck of the most modern and luxurious ship in the world, slipping an ice-cold Tizer as you glide through azure crystal waters.

An attractive prospect? Certainly. But the directors of Thomas Crook shipping can't afford to do that until they've sold a few tickets for this GBH cruise on a crudely salvaged nuclear waste tanker.

And holiday prices start from just £6 million plus VAT (not including snorkel). *

*Ticket price example quoted is for 3 minutes on board an inflatable pedalo in a sewage settling tank somewhere near Birmingham next November, when it's raining.

NB:
Ventilation is especially good on the SS Mal de Mer, with its unique "large hole in the side" layout.

JOHNNY JAMBALIN and the MAGIC VIOLIN

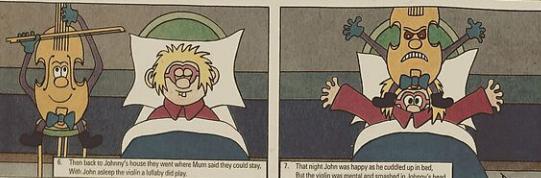

2. "Get out of here you nasty thing" he heard the shop man roar, And as he did a violin came flying through the door.

4. As soon as Johnny pressed the switch the instrument stood straight, "Thank you very much, my dear boy. You can be my mate".

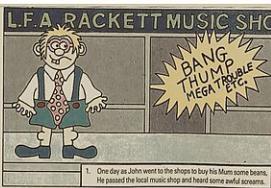

6. Then back to Johnny's house they went where Mum said they could stay, Well John asleep the violin a lullaby did play.

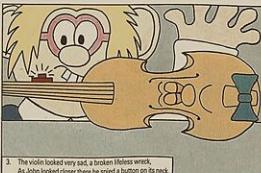

7. That night John was happy as he curdled up in bed, But the violin was mental and smashed in Johnny's head.

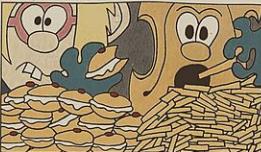

Moral - Never twiddle with a fiddle.

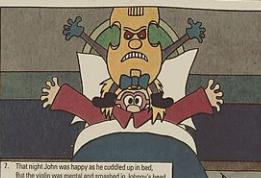

1. One day as John went to the shops to buy his Mum some beans, He passed the local music shop and heard some awful screams.

3. The violin looked very sad, a broken箇est wreck, As John looked closer there he spied a button on its neck.

5. Johnny and the violin became the best of chums, They went and got themselves some chips, and then they got some buns.

7. That night John was happy as he curdled up in bed, But the violin was mental and smashed in Johnny's head.

Moral - Never twiddle with a fiddle.

ROBIN HOOD MEETS LITTLE JOHN

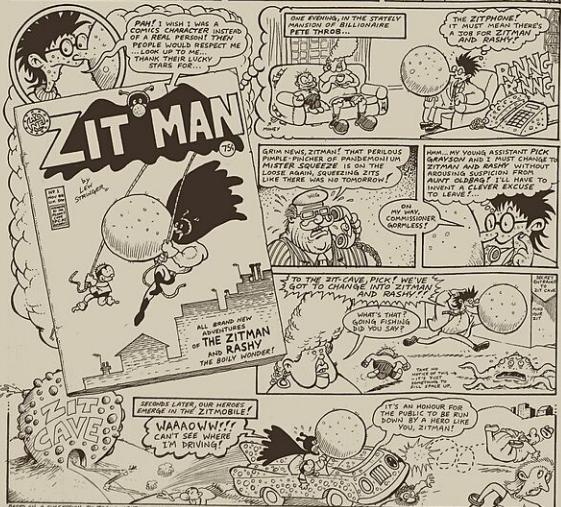

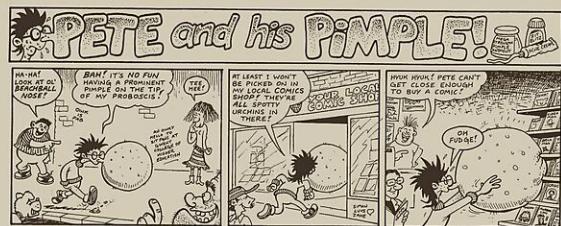

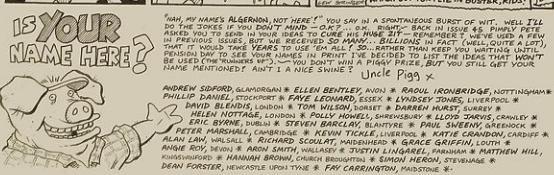

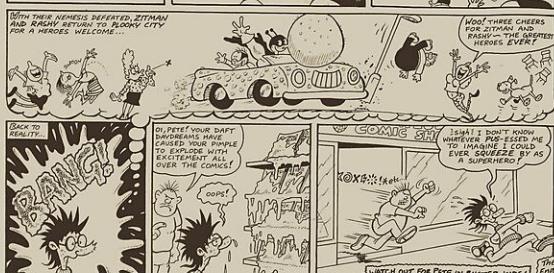

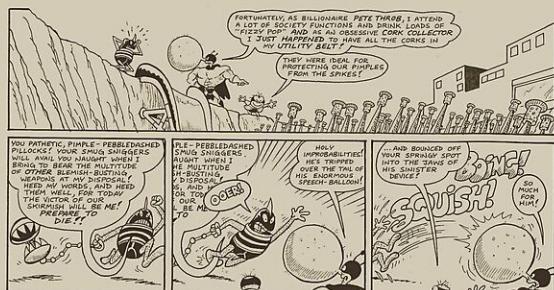

NEWS FLASH

BY DAVID LEACH

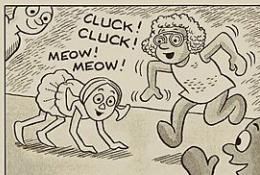

1. Murph and his friends were very bored. There was nothing to do.

2. "Come on!" said Grandmurph. "Let's play a game to cheer ourselves up!"

3. They played a game impersonating their favourite animals. Folly pretended to be a cat, and Delilah was a chicken. Soon it was Murph's turn.

4. But just as Murph was about to start a giant foot game down from above and flattened him!

5. It was Tony Art, who owned the studio they lived in. He hadn't been looking where he was walking. When he saw the brown mess all over his shoes he frowned. "Pesky dogs!" he snarled, and walked away.

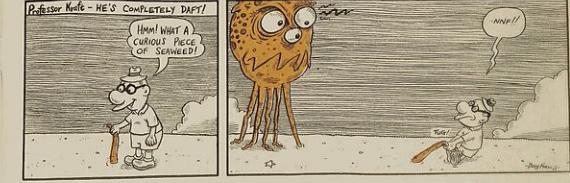

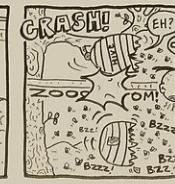

6. "What a brilliant impression of dog-dirt!" said Grandmurph. "Actually, it's an impression of a shoe—all over him," said Folly, laughing at the trademarks on Murph.

The Tale of Mouldie Socks and the 3 Boars

ONE MORNING, THE 3 BOARS RETURNED FROM A WALK TO FIND THE FRONT DOOR OPEN...

Once upon a time, 3 boars lived in a cosy thatched sty in the middle of an enchanted wood...

"Somebody has been sitting in my porridge, too!" said Baby Boar.

"Not only that - Somebody has been eating my chair!" exclaimed Daddy Boar.

"Somebody has been eating the sofa, too!" observed Baby Boar.

Just then, Mouldie Socks appeared from behind the curtains.

"I'm terribly sorry," she said. "I thought it was the suite you could eat between meals!"

AND EVERYBODY LAUGHED.
